CASH FLOW vs. MONEY YOU HAVE

Please realize, "cash flow", and "how much money you have", are two different things. Whether you are educated or experienced in business or math, or not, everyone can benefit from this simple distinction. For the purposes of showing you how to use the basic formula cash flow is the amount of money that you have coming in each month. You know how much that is right?

Write that down. It is approximate. No matter what it is, I know that you know approximately how much you have coming in each month. So write that amount down, like this:

$i = $$ (put the amount of money that you take in each month, including everything)

Next, write down an estimate of how much money you spend each month, like this:

$X = $$ (put in the amount of money that you spend all together each month)

$$i - X = XS$$

XS is the amount of money that you have left over, or that you are under each month.

$i-X=XS$ is the basic formula.

Realizing the basic formula means that you are living in such a way that XS is a positive number. If XS is a positive number, then you have a form of financial balance, or financial freedom, that greatly enhances your overall well being.

The basic formula is applicable to any amount of money, so that it can fit into any kind or size of lifestyle. What is important is that the formula gives you a guideline for balance, which is a form of freedom when applied in this way to your own financial life. Your goal is to have XS, which then you put in savings and investments, which eventually makes you a larger income, and that is a complete wealth cycle.

Keeping aware of your total income, total expenses, and the result of income minus expenses, is at the core of all financial systems. The idea is to become aware of how this formula is actually operating in your life now, and with that awareness, along with the actual formula, you can start to build XS money which you then use to invest. The money you invest, eventually makes you more money, increasing your income. You see how it works?

There is a phenomenon that is very common. It is no matter how much money someone makes, their expenses keep going up, the more they make. You buy more things, the more money you have. To a certain extent, that is great. With this formula, you are able to keep your eye on your XS and realize that XS is the true method to increase your income. And from that increased income, you can allocate more for spending but keep your XS getting higher and higher, so that your income can grow.

The basic formula is simple, yet its applications are very complex. This is a profound tool for materializing the life that you want. Most people go to sleep mentally, in the financial area, because it becomes too complicated. The basic formula keeps it simple for you. Use the basic formula, and begin to apply it to your own financial life today. It is already working in your life. Add your awareness to how it is now, and start to adjust it with the way you live your life, and you can both feel better, and build wealth better.

The basic formula has many applications. If you wish to call me, or talk to me to get help working with the basic formula in your own life, please call Jorj at 619-819-8774 or e-mail me.

I have presented the basic formula in the way that i feel is the most helpful to get started on your life as it is NOW in the present moment. The simple concept, WHEN APPLIED to your life now, which you can do right now and when you need to will do wonders for your financial life.

To review:

The basic formula has three components. i , X , and XS .

i = your monthly income. for the purpose of this formula, income means all the money that your bring in from all sources, averaged on a monthly basis.

X = the amount of money that you spend on each month. This includes everything, no exceptions. This is usually calculated by taking what you normally spend in total on all things each month. Since that number varies from month to month somewhat, you may need to take an average figure.

XS = the amount of money that you have in excess each month. This money is available for you to save and invest. This money is essential to financial growth. Making XS , saving and investing it, can eventually cause you to have (i) be generated solely from the money that your excess (XS) is making for you.

I am now complete in my presentation of the basic formula, except to say that I understand that the formula is one thing, and making it come true in the most excellent way in your own life, is another. There are many things to consider, to handle, to overcome. And there is much good to experience. Many miracles. An amazing new life to unfold for you every day from now on.
